The Adilas Building is a large two story brick structure featuring an asymmetrical facade. The segmental arch bays on the second floor are arranged 2-1-4 with the single bay accented by pilasters which rise above the cornice line and frame the building's name and date of construction. A brick corbel table is an additional building feature. On the ground floor the original storefront area has been obscured through the addition of stucco siding.

A dry goods and drug store occupied the building in 1909.

(Note: The Adilas Building is "Salida" spelled backwards.)
