LEADVILLE

COLORADO

Leadville

County seat of Lake county, on the D. & R. G. and C. M. Rys., also terminal of the Leadville division of the C. & S. Ry., 172 miles southwest from Denver. Leadville has been quite properly named the "Carbonate City." She yielded in silver from date of the first discoveries until 1893 an average of a million dollars per month. It was believed by many that the slump in silver would ruin Leadville, but her enterprising miners and citizens went to work with a will and made her a gold camu instead of silver. Leadville has a steady output of gold and silver second only to that of Cripple Creek, and discoveries are being made monthly of new mines of both kinds. The future prospects are as good for this camp today as at any time since the first discoveries were made. Population 7,508. Altitude 10,200 feet.

SALIDA.

Salida is the natural center of commerce for a vast tract of territory representing varied resources in the southwestern portion of Colorado. It is the converging point of the standard and narrow guage systems of the Denver & Rio Grande Railroad. Salida is one of the prettiest and best built towns in Colorado. Her population 6,000, her hotels commodious, her schools are of the best, her six churches add to her social benefits. Her railroad shops and employes make a pay roll of $110,000 a month. The 1,000-ton plant smelter employes about 600 men. And above all, her climate is unequalled; 350 days of sunshine are not found in any other town or city. Never very cold, never very hot. Altitude 7,050 feet.
